Detailed Action

1.) The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2.) Claims 1-4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over either one of Kato et al. (6,486,629) or the Japanese document no. 2002-035953 (cited by applicant) taken with the Japanese document no. 61-112585 (cited by applicant). Either one of Kato et al. (6,486,629) or the Japanese document no. 2002-035953 disclose a spot welding system and method wherein a controller controls a servomotor to supply a predetermined pressing force to the objects of welding (see the English abstract and figure 1 of the Japanese document no. 2002-035953 and see figure 5 and the discussion in columns 2-3 of Kato et al. (6,486,629)). The claims differ from either one of Kato et al. (6,486,629) or the Japanese document no. 2002-035953 in calling for a temperature sensor to detect a temperature of the servomotor and to modify the control signals based on the detected temperature. This difference does not patentably distinguish over the prior art. At the time applicant's invention was made, it would have been obvious to have incorporated temperature sensing as claimed into the systems of either one of Kato et al. (6,486,629) or the Japanese document no. 2002-035953, the motivation being the teachings of the Japanese document no. 61-112585 that it is advantageous to compensate motor control signals on the basis of a signal from a temperature sensor indicating motor temperature (see the English abstract of the Japanese document no. 61-112585 and note temperature sensor 12 in figure 1 of the document).

3.) The patent to Kleinau et al. (6,900,607) is cited to show a prior art motor controller that includes a temperature sensor.
